

“Memorial Day”

Once again today we gather to honor the dead,
Let’s remember their families as we bow our head.
These men shared all or some part of their life,
They left behind families and some a new wife.
To fight for their country and keep it free,
And today we enjoy the fruits of this liberty.
So as we’ve placed these flags on each grave,
And as we lower the flag half mast and watch it wave,
As the citizens of this nation, let it never be said,
That we’ve forgotten those whose blood was shed.
So in our hearts once again this is our way to say,
We thank you and honor you on this Memorial Day.

By Louise Hall